

Volleyball Meetup to Celebrate Father's Day

Taichung After-care Association Shows Care in Taichung Prison

The Taichung Branch of Taiwan After-care Association organized a volleyball meetup in Taichung Prison on August 8th to highlight the meaning of Father's Day, an important yet rarely celebrated holiday. The association invited current and retired volleyball players that were on the national team, coaches and judges to celebrate Father's Day with inmates at Taichung Prison.

The event started at 9:30 A.M. on August 8th, 2017. Distinguished guests include Chiang Hui-Min, Chief Prosecutor at the Taichung Branch of Taiwan High Prosecutors Office, Chang Hung-Mou, Chief Prosecutor at Taichung District Prosecutors Office, Wang Chin-Tzu, Chairman of the Taichung Branch of Taiwan After-care Association, and Huang Wei-Hsien, Warden of Taichung Prison. The guests all served the ball for the event and gave a few words to encourage inmates, hoping to show society's concern and expectations for inmates. They also worked together as a team and encouraged inmates to put away all preconceived ideas for a new beginning, establish good interaction patterns, and make plans for life after prison.

Chairman Wang Chin-Tzu also introduced the national team members, including players, coaches and judges. The game was for learning from each other, and who won was not the most important thing. Its purpose was to remind inmates of Father's Day, and that the most important meaning of Father's Day is to not give up and bravely walk a righteous path, for themselves and their father. Warden Huang Wei-Hsien also encouraged inmates playing and watching the game to not forget their original intentions, to remember their mistakes and return to the right path; be a good son to their father and be a good father to their son. He wanted them to remember the true meaning of the event is that “society never lacked care and acceptance,” so that they will feel the warmth of society with confidence, and stand up again to create a stage that belongs to themselves. The event was successfully concluded in a friendly and happy game between the two parties, the perfect ending for today’s volleyball meetup.
